"No Political Significance"—Joke on
Hon. J. P. Alexander.

Epictetus was a Stoic; so also are the Lincoln Republicans, and, like Epictetus, they have decided to follow the only plan that will vouchsafe contentment—namely, to dispossess themselves in advance of all that is out of their power. Their quiet little gathering at Lakeside Park Thursday brought together a number of men, who were at one time prominent in the councils of their party, but who of late years have not had their names printed in black type in connection with great political victories. Here was a man who had been "slaughtered in the house of his friends;" there was a man who "had been lied to by Hanna;" over yonder was a man who didn't dance when he was piped unto by the bosses, and he could not now be selected to the position of teller at a precinct caucus; not far from him was a man who doesn't "concur" in the policies of the Administration—he will not even be permitted to carry a flag when Dobson makes his triumphant entry into Youngstown to attend the campaign opening. And thus might similar things be said of nearly every individual present. Lincoln Republicans! And every one of them "turned down" in Summit county! Evidently the kind of Republicanism emulated by Lincoln, is not the "rage" in Summit county. There has arisen a people who know not Lincoln, and the followers of the principles of the great man have of late yearned in vain for recognition.

But they have ceased to yearn. So far as they are now concerned the Republican party of today may, to use some of Hanna's choice repartee, "go soak its head." In the coming campaign, they will toil not, neither spin. They will narrow down their efforts, and take life easy solidifying themselves so as to be invulnerable to future attacks.

Again, the language of Epictetus applies to the Lincoln Republicans of Summit county—in a political sense. He said:

"I must die; well, but must I die groaning, too? I will speak, what appears to be right, and if the despot says, 'Then I will put you to death,' I will reply, 'When did I ever tell you that I was immortal? You will do your part and I mine; it is yours to kill and mine to die intrepid; yours to banish, mine to depart untroubled.' How do we act in a voyage? We choose the pilot, the sailors the hour. Afterwards, comes a storm. What have I to care for? My part is performed. This matter belongs to the pilot. But the ship is sinking what then, have I to do? That which alone I can do—submit to being drowned without fear, without clamor or accusing of God, but as one who knows that what is born, must likewise die."

The Lincoln Republicans were at Lakeside Park Thursday, to, as one of

been given instructions before he left home, burst forth with "And now we're shooting the gospel of equality and brotherly love into the hearts of a struggling people, with cannon and rifles."

Dinner was served from 12 to 1. It was after the fashion of a basket picnic dinner, and was heartily enjoyed. Immediately after dinner, the assemblage was called to order.

Hon. N. D. Tibbals was elected chairman, and J. Park Alexander, secretary. It was decided to effect a permanent organization, and meet annually. Officers elected are:

President, Hon. N. D. Tibbals; first vice president, F. W. Myers; Mogadore; second vice president, Rev. F. M. Green, Kent; secretary and treasurer, Hon. J. Park Alexander; executive committee, R. C. Ellsworth, West Richfield; Sydney Barnes, Tallmadge; Philip Wagoner, Nimsila; John McCounell, Northfield.

When the meeting was adjourned, it was decided to meet at the call of the president.

Short speeches were made by Hon. N. D. Tibbals, Hon. S. P. Wolcott, of Kent, Hon. J. Park Alexander, and General A. C. Voris. With but a very few exceptions all the speeches related to Lincoln.

Hon. N. D. Tibbals spoke of Lincoln during the war times and of the political platforms of the two parties at that time. His remarks were non-committal so far as present campaign works is concerned.

Hon. S. P. Wolcott made a good speech from a Republican point of view. He attributed all good things during the past 40 years to the Republican party, and he gave Lincoln much credit for what he had done to start the party in the right direction. Mr. McKinley according to Mr. Wolcott's prediction, will be returned to the White House. He urged his hearers to stick to "Lincoln principles," and carry them forward. Mr. Wolcott shook "None whatever," said Hon. N. D. Tibbals. "In making my address, I earnestly avoided saying anything in reference to the present campaign."

Judge Tibbals was chairman of the day. In his speech he didn't mention President McKinley's name.

"Well, Hon. J. Park Alexander didn't mention President McKinley's name, either."

"No," replied Judge Tibbals "nor did General A. C. Voris, and Hon. S. P. Wolcott, of Kent, who made a speech more nearly partisan than the others, only referred to Mr. McKinley, near the close of his address."

Judge Tibbals said further, in speaking of the event: "It was no campaign opening for Summit county. I suppose that some of the gentlemen who were there will vote for Mr. McKinley, and that others will not. I was rather surprised to see a number of politicians there, both Republicans and Democrats."

And the Lincoln Republicans had a good time at the park, too. They did nothing in the forenoon, other than talk reminiscences of the great Lincoln, recalling some of his good stories, pure as parables and sparkling with wit—and they also talked of his great work, his love for the common people and the struggles that he himself had with poverty and tribulations during his early life. "All people are created equal," they said, was one of Lincoln's favorite quotations, and then one of the old line Republicans, who should have hands with Mr. Lincoln, Feb. 15, 1861.

"You can't escape history," said Mr. Wolcott, pointing an accusing finger toward an imaginary phalanx of Democrats. "You can't get away from the truth, nor can you escape the condemnation of thinking people."

Concluding his address, Mr. Wolcott said: "But, my old Republican friends, we can't do much more for our party. We have nearly run our race—and now most cheerfully do we commit its sacred interests to those who shall follow in our footsteps. Guard, we ask you, with sleepless vigilance, as we have tried to do, the ark of our covenant."

Hon. J. Park Alexander gave a very excellent address on the life of Lincoln. He described in interesting detail the many struggles and victories of Lincoln, and quoted from some of his addresses.

But some one started a joke on Mr. Alexander, and it spread throughout the whole assemblage.

"What's he doing up there on the platform?" asked one.

"Who?"

"Park Alexander."

"Oh, yes; it is a little bit strange."

"During Lincoln's great fight against Stephen A. Douglass, Democratic nominee for President, Mr. Alexander was not so hilarious in booming Lincoln as he is today."

"Yes; I remember now."

"He was secretary of a meeting held to ratify Douglass' nomination."

"And they say that he didn't vote for Lincoln in 1860."

This little bit of pleasantry stirred up considerable conversation, but, then, everything went along smoothly, and Mr. Alexander worked vigorously to register the names of all his fellow Lincoln Republicans, and he got a large list, too.

Gen. A. C. Voris never did do things in a half-hearted way. When he mounted the platform, he talked so vigorously and eloquently that he was frequently interrupted by applause. The first part of his address was devoted to the discussion of Lincoln as a man and statesman. The concluding part of the speech dealt with things of the present time.

"All aspiring people," he said, "who love liberty, are looking to our country for encouragement and sympathy. Wherever our flag has gone, wherever it has held sway, there peace and honor have come to the people. The man who today has no more confidence in America than to believe that its purpose is to degrade and subject people, does not understand American character. This government is no confederate of those who would oppress their fellow man. Thank God! opportunity has again presented itself for us to extend our benevolence and civilization, and we should sweep away with cannon all those who would obstruct the march of the flag. I believe in coercion—the right kind of coercion. We coerced the Confederate army, and I've no faith in the man who is afraid of coercion. It is just as necessary to coerce now as it was in the Confederate times, and I hope that we shall awaken to our duty with a new life."

The reunion of Summit county Lincoln Republicans was attended by 177 people. Their names follow: J. W. Myers, J. M. Demas, N. S. Porter, Benjamin Allman, S. D. Spencer, E. C. Hurlbert, A. Kuhlman, Minor J. Allen, George J. Warner, T. E. Dew, Thomas Baird, Jacob Swartz, H.
